

Fiona MacAllan

She started her career in the oil industry working for Mobil and then got her first PR break working at Chevron.

1983 First job

Fiona returned to the oil industry where she spent most of her career. She worked in media relations dealing with the world's largest oil platform disaster (167 deaths) and provided communication support during the company take over, and also became involved in sponsorship for both Formula 1 & major art exhibitions during her time at Elf.

1988-2001

Back to the corporate life at Wolseley, as Head of Global Internal Communications, spending one year as interim Global Corporate Communications Director working with 28 different countries in 17 languages.

2004-2008

Fiona completed a HND in Communication Studies and several professional qualifications in Marketing and Advertising afterwards.

Education 1981-1983

Moved to PR Consultants as an Account Executive and organised the Norwegian Royal visit.

1986-1988

A career break allowed Fiona to travel the world, live in the USA for six months and renovate homes in London and Oxfordshire.

Career break 2001-2004

Fiona joined Nationwide Building Society in 2008 as the Head of Internal and Change Communication working directly with the CEO. She has won five Excellence Awards from the Institute of Internal Communications.
