After leaving university she worked in retail (in her parents business) for four years while looking for a more permanent role elsewhere.

1982-1986

Julia stayed with the MOD for a number of years becoming an IT programmer and IT team leader during her time here. She managed all of this without any formal IT qualifications!

1990-1996

Julia is now a Platform Manager managing five permanent System Managers, making team leadership a vital skill.

Today

Julia studied English and Education at university. She knew by the time that she graduated that she was not going to pursue her original career ambition of becoming a teacher.

1979-1982 Education

Applying for a number of different jobs in the Civil Service, Julia was offered a role in the Ministry of Defence (MOD) as a Business Analyst and IT trainer. This role required her to learn all about the work going on in different areas of the MOD and to train staff on the IT systems in place to help them with their jobs.

1986-1990

Joining Nationwide Building Society in 1996, Julia developed new IT programmes for the business. One of her first projects as a Senior Systems Developer required her to re-design the IT programme that produced mortgage statements (financial documents showing how much you owe on your mortgage).

1996-2001

Julia later became a Systems Manager working across different areas of the business including Commercial Lending and Banking and Savings, ensuring that their IT systems are working correctly. She met her future husband at Nationwide and they married in 2008.
