

A Building Society

Working Life

Building Societies are like banks. People can save money in accounts, or borrow money for things like a house.

But the people that work there don't all work with money and numbers. There are lots of different jobs:

- Some work with people, talking on the phone or meeting them.
- Some work with Closed-circuit Television (CCTV), keeping the place safe and secure.
- Some work with food in the cafes and canteens.
- Some work with design and photos and adverts.
- Some work developing new ideas.
- Some work with legal things.
- Some work looking after the others.

Working when you are grown up can be fun, if you choose something you like or are good at.

What would you like to do?
